FOR FOUNDERS & SERVICE BUSINESSES

Turn visitors into qualified inquiries.

Find the gaps between your offer, your proof and your contact form - then plan one measurable improvement.

4 PAGES / FILLABLE PDF / 30-MINUTE FIRST PASS

Conversion Optimization Guide

A clearer offer and a testable next step.

01 Set one conversion goal

Choose a page, audience and success metric.

02 Audit the path to inquiry

Use seven checks to find avoidable friction.

03 Rewrite the critical moments

Apply offer, proof and form examples.

04 Plan your first experiment

Record a hypothesis and a decision rule.

Website / route to review

Type into the fields or print this workbook. Save a copy after filling it in; viewer support varies.

02 / AUDIT

Is the next step clear enough?

Tick only what you can demonstrate on the page. Unticked items become candidates for improvement, not a conversion score.

- [ ] One primary conversion

  Name one action for this page: qualified inquiry, booked call or signup. Keep the main CTA aligned with it.

- [ ] An offer a visitor can explain

  State who you help, what changes for them and what you deliver. Ask someone to repeat it back after a short look.

- [ ] Scope without guesswork

  Explain deliverables, exclusions and the next step. Show pricing or a meaningful starting range only when accurate.

- [ ] Evidence beside the decision

  Connect a real case study, screenshot or attributed quote to the relevant claim. Give metrics context and a time period.

- [ ] A specific call to action

  Use a clear verb and outcome, such as "Discuss my website refresh". Explain what happens after the click.

- [ ] A form that earns each field

  Ask only what is needed now. Use visible labels, useful errors and a clear success state; preserve entries on errors.

- [ ] A complete mobile path

  Try the page with one hand and by keyboard. Check readable text, visible focus, usable buttons and the full submission path.

Pick the closest obstacle to the goal

Start with a broken form or unclear offer before polishing decorative details. Choose one gap you can investigate this week.

03 / APPLY

Make the offer easy to act on.

Use these examples as starting points. Replace every audience, scope and proof claim with something true for your business.

OFFER / Before

"We build innovative digital experiences."

OFFER / After - illustrative copy

"A focused website refresh for service businesses: clearer offers, faster pages and a simpler path to inquiry."

Show the proof before asking for commitment

Pair the offer with one relevant project: the problem, what you changed, and the evidence available. If you cannot attribute a business result, show the delivered work and explain how it was verified.

Match the form to the decision

For a first conversation, try name, email, website URL and one goal. Collect budget or detailed scope when it helps qualification. A multi-step form is an option to test, not a guaranteed improvement.

Measure the path, not just the click

Track the primary CTA, form start, successful submission and qualified inquiry. Count submissions only after success. Keep personal data out of analytics event properties and check events in your tool.

A useful conversion rate

Qualified inquiries / eligible page sessions x 100. Define "qualified", the date range and traffic source before comparing results.

04 / EXPERIMENT

Plan one change. Decide from evidence.

Keep the audience, traffic source and measurement window comparable. These fields form your experiment brief.

Goal + metric definition + baseline + date range

If we change [one thing], then [metric] will improve because [reason]

Success threshold + guardrail + minimum sample / duration + decision date

Low traffic? Start with a usability check.

Ask relevant people to complete the task and describe what confused them. For an A/B test, plan sample size and duration first; before/after changes alone do not establish causation.

Turn your findings into a focused refresh.

Share your page URL, your main goal and the biggest gap you found. We can discuss scope for a Conversion Refresh.

Discuss a conversion refresh >

Scan to explore

READ MORE / PRIMARY SOURCES

W3C WAI / Accessible forms

Google Analytics / Event measurement

Edition 01 / October 2026. Recheck guidance for your framework version.